Introduction

Albury-Wodonga has progressively developed into a thriving, innovative and fast-growing region for manufacturing and industry.

Located on the border of New South Wales and Victoria, Albury-Wodonga is made up of two cities situated on the banks of the Murray River. When combined as a twin city, Albury-Wodonga is Australia's 20th largest city with a population of 89,213 residents.

Manufacturing is one of the largest industry sectors in Albury-Wodonga, employing 12.8 per cent of the workforce, and generating more than $693 million annually in value-added activity.

To assist in the regions' promotional activities, there is an ongoing need for an up-to-date investment document highlighting the growth and scope of manufacturing and industrial activity in Albury-Wodonga.

This publication raises awareness of the services provided by the manufacturing and industrial sector locally and contains relevant information for local, national and overseas organisations.

Significant manufacturing and industrial businesses have chosen Albury-Wodonga as their headquarters because of the natural strengths of the region including its strategic location, workforce, infrastructure and land availability.

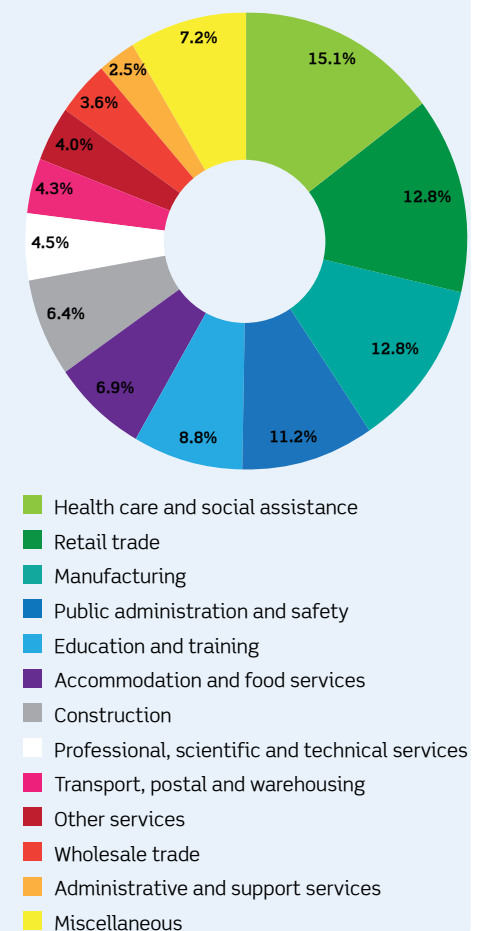

Albury-Wodonga is home to a broad range of industry, from large multinationals through to small niche producers, and is underpinned by several strong industries providing a stable base and diversity.

Advantages of manufacturing in Albury-Wodonga

Albury-Wodonga has much to offer manufacturing and industry.

Key strategic advantages include:

- Proximity between Australia's two largest cities, Melbourne and Sydney;
- More than 75 per cent of Australia's population can be reached by next-day transport haul;
- Access to an efficient transport network, with road, rail, and air facilities;
- High-quality affordable industrial land opportunities, including Logic Wodonga and Baranduda Industrial Estate;
- The support of 7000 existing business enterprises;
- Excellent health and education facilities including two major universities and widespread vocational training providers for staff development and training;
- Significant operational economies including lower labour costs; and,
- A highly skilled and productive workforce in excess of 45,000 people in Albury-Wodonga and a regional labour market in excess of 83,000 people.

Brief description of ANZIC

In this publication ANZIC (Australia and New Zealand Standard Industrial Classification) codes are used to determine manufacturing classifications.

Industry code information is widely used by organisations and researchers, and ANZIC codes have been in use since 1993 in economic censuses and surveys in both Australia and New Zealand.

How can we help?

Staff in council's Economic Development team are dedicated to providing assistance and advice to potential new locators and expanding businesses. The unit offers assistance in a variety of ways, including:
